AMERICAN STOCK DECLINING?

Present reproductive trends in the United States point to a possible decline in the intelligence of the American people, amounting to approximately two or three percent, according to Dr. Norman E. Himes, Professor of Sociology at Colgate University.

Dr. Himes points out that the wrong family stocks are now doing most of the reproducing. One-half of the next generation, he says, is being produced by one-third of the population, and this is the poorer, socially disadvantaged part which is unable to give its children adequate advantages for education and cultural advance.

So far as we are aware, there is no dispute as to which part of our population is doing the reproducing for the nation. There is considerable discussion over the proper steps to be taken to meet the condition which, in the long run, threatens a dire effect upon our democracy.

There are those who contend that the proper thing to do is to see that there is widespread knowledge of birth control among all peoples. The argument is that such instruction will reverse the present trend. On the other hand, there are those who insist that the so-called most fortunate classes should undertake to equalize the situation by doing more reproducing themselves. This basic idea may be all right, but just now, it seems not to be taking so well with the so-called fortunate classes.

There seems to be another way to meet the social threat. This involves a continuous effort to provide equal educational and cultural advantages for all elements of our population. In time, this will tend to lift the average of the so-called unfortunate groups through the gradual process of improving their children.

BUSINESS

New York, April 25.—Before the start of a race, the horses are usually nervously stomping the ground and milling about at the post. Jockeys have a difficult time steering their mounts into the right lanes and there is much confusion. Sometimes one horse breaks the tape and the race has to be started over again. In much the same way business and government are trying to re-start the "prosperity" race. There is confusion at present but eventually the gun of confidence will go off, purchasing agents will begin to buy, men and women will go back to work, factories and mills will hum and better times will return. It has always happened in the past . . . it will again.

NOTICE TO ALL STOCK OWNERS

Recently a notice to all stock owners has been posted, stating that tracts of Government-owned land, on which fires, attributed to grazing, occur, will be closed to all grazing. The notice has been misinterpreted by many people and this notice is to explain to you that it is not the intention of the Forest Service to prohibit the grazing of cattle on Government-owned land where these cattle are used for domestic purposes. Only in sections of the country where fires are set for the purpose of burning the range, will it be necessary to close Government-owned land to grazing.

As long as the fires are kept down by the local citizens, we will continue to allow grazing of a certain number of stock, as we have in the past. Whether or not the people in each community will be allowed to continue to graze their stock on Government-owned land, depends entirely upon the people themselves, and it is up to you who own stock to see that fire is kept off Government land so that you may continue to use the land for grazing of your stock. E. M. OLLIVER District Ranger.

FARMERS' COLUMN

THE INSECTS

A most important speculation on the part of gardeners revolves about what to do to bring their gardens past the insect hazard that besets them as regularly as the seasons roll around. Sometimes, the trouble starts so innocently and unobtrusively that one is lulled into thinking that this is not to be the year for this or that insect, only to be made rudely aware, later, that misplaced optimism is an extremely expensive commodity.

On the other hand, one need not be a hopeless pessimist concerning garden insect matters, because of contemplating the great number of pests there are and the great variety of vegetables they attack, for there are but two kinds of insects and two methods of control, though modified somewhat by the nature of the vegetable to be protected.

One class of insects consumes foliage or root or stem tissue. For this class, the control is arsenical, applied where the insect does its feeding. Coupled with using the correct material and applying it at the proper place, is also the matter of right timing. It is in this last respect that so many gardeners fail, and from these come the bulk of the complaint that the recommended remedy "fattened the bugs."

The insects of the other class have no chewing mouthparts but subsist on plant sap which they draw thru pointed snouts plunged into the deeper tissues of the vegetable plants. It is quite obvious that inasmuch as no surface feeding is ever done, surface-applied control materials cannot have effect, but the insects must be destroyed thru other means. Fortunately, the sucking insects are soft-bodied throughout their lives, or at least until just before they become adult, and they succumb easily to materials that corrode their bodies or effect their "gassing," if applied to hit them.

For the chewing insects, an arsenical stomach poison has been recommended, but arsenic is poisonous to man as well. Therefore, judgment must be used not ever to apply it on plant parts that later become human food. If the insects continue their depredations after food parts form, or if they are troublesome on plants that are wholly used for food, the new insecticide, rotenone, should be used, for, although deadly to all insects, it is harmless to man. It comes as a concentrate to be dissolved in water, or as a dust, ready-mixed. All druggists or seedsmen carry it or can obtain it.

For the sucking insects, the most simple material to use is tobacco tea, made at home by steeping trash tobacco in water, or because the nicotine strength of tobacco is not uniform and this results in "tea" of uncertain strength, commercial nicotine sulfate, "black leaf 40," instead. This material all druggists and seedsmen handle. Bought in small glass bottles, it is rather expensive; gardeners should purchase it in the larger tin containers. To answer complaint that on greens, the tobacco flavor persists, let it be said that rotenone dust or spray may be used instead. The expense of the two is about the same.

WALNUTS PLANTED

J. B. Finch of Powell County has given 250 pounds of black walnuts to the Cumberland National Forest. The walnuts have been planted near the Red River in Powell County on an area of about ten acres.

Mr. Finch's gift was prompted by his interest in reforestation and the work being carried on by the U. S. Forest Service in that area. The plantation has been designated as the Finch Experimental Plantation.

The Forest Service plans to place black locust seedlings in the plantation next spring, thus producing a mixed planting from which locust posts can be harvested some years prior to the time when the black walnut trees will be mature.—Cumberland National Forest.

BUILD AGAINST TERMITES

Persons planning to build houses are urged by agricultural engineers at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture to adopt every possible method to prevent damage by termites. Most contractors now know how to termite-proof construction. Where termites already are at work they may be temporarily controlled by poisoning. Effective poisons are orthodichlorobenzene or a mixture of kerosene and coal-tar creosote.

SEAL GARMENT BAGS

Paper garment bags and wrappings and cardboard closets and boxes protect against clothes moths only if they are sealed tightly at every opening and if the clothes or other contents were entirely free of moths when the container was sealed, say home economic women at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Once moths get inside paper or cardboard containers, damage will result, even though the paper has been treated with cedar, tar or pine oil. Scented paper or cardboard is no more effective against moths than plain paper, it is said.

Clothing which has just been dry-cleaned or washed before wrapping in unbroken paper with the edges carefully sealed will remain safe from moths indefinitely. Unbroken hat boxes or other cardboard containers will also exclude moths if carefully sealed. To destroy any moth that may have found its way in with the clothing, put flake naphthalene in the package.

T. V. A. PHOSPHATE

The Kentucky state office of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at the Experiment Station at Lexington announces that arrangements have been made with the Tennessee Valley Authority whereby triple superphosphate will be furnished on request to farmers in lieu of part of their agricultural conservation payments this year. Requests already have been received from county conservation associations for several thousand tons. It is believed there will be enough phosphate to fill all immediate orders.

Last year farmers in 118 Kentucky counties requested a total of 24,574 tons of this high-grade fertilizer, and received 18,588 tons, according to records at the state A. A. office. This vast tonnage was spread on a grand total of 258,499 acres of grass and hay crops, including, in round numbers, 29,000 acres of alfalfa, 51,000 acres of lespedeza, 26,000 acres of bluegrass and permanent pastures, 16,000 acres of red clover and grass mixtures, and 7,000 acres of red clover alone.

Phosphate furnished under this arrangement may be used only in connection with seeding or maintaining pastures and hay crops.

Both lungs were injured and it is believed that there were other injuries also.

WASHINGTON NOTES

WPA BUYS CLOTH

The WPA is placing orders for 35,000,000 yards of cotton textiles for sewing room projects. About 165,000 women, now working in 9,000 sewing rooms, are making garments and household articles. The present order for materials is expected to aid the textile industry in maintaining employment and production levels.

DUBINSKY SPEAKS

Rather than help make permanent the break between the CIO and the A. F. of L., David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies Garment Workers, says he will lead his 260,000 members into an independent position outside the CIO organization. He does not want the CIO to set up a structure paralleling the older union organization. While believing that the organization of the unorganized in five mass industries—automobiles, rubber, steel, cement and aluminum—was a necessity, he does not think there is any justification for further dualism of organization. He declares that ninety percent of the failure to reach a compromise could be blamed on "labor politicians, bureaucrats, unwilling to lose their own personal powers."

FEDERAL RELIEF

Federal Relief outlays during the five-year period, 1933-37, totaled $14,218,773,200, according to data prepared by the Central Statistical Board, a Government agency. The figure includes: General Relief, $2,905,833,000; Federal Works Program to employ relief labor, $4,720,027,000; CCC Works program, $1,864,150,000; all specialized types of assistance to unemployed, $270,438,000; rehabilitation loans to destitute and low-income farmers, $231,281,000; Emergency Public Works, $3,800,740,000; Surplus commodities distributed for relief, $426,304,000. These figures do not include about $5,085,000,000 contributed to the programs by states and local governments.

"TO PAY THE MONEY BACK"

Chairman Jesse Jones, of the RFC, explains that his organization in 1937 had an excess of collections over disbursements of almost one billion dollars. By the latter part of that year, he says it looked as though the RFC could withdraw from the lending field. However, the recession caused the President to authorize the RFC to start lending again on February 18th. Mr. Jones points out that the agency is not embarking on a new lending program and that while his purpose is to make business and industrial loans which will create work, "we will not feel authorized to make such loans unless, in our opinion, the borrower will be able to pay the money back." He insists that his agency will not compete with private lending agencies and calls upon bankers to make a greater effort to meet the borrowing requirements of business.

TVA LITIGATIONS

Further litigation against the Tennessee Valley Authority is assured by the action of eighteen private utility companies in appealing to the Supreme Court in January. Because the record in the case is so large, officials doubt whether the issue will get to the court before its summer adjournment.

JAPANESE DENIAL

Japanese officials were prompt to deny that their warships were recently cruising in the vicinity of Da-vao Gulf in the Southern Philippines. Philippine merchant vessels and customs authorities, however, confirm the presence of foreign warships in the gulf and U. S. destroyers, assisted by airplanes were said to have been dispatched to the area to investigate the report. The master of a Philippine ship said that the vessels flew no identifying flags and refused to respond to a radio request for their nationality. The location of the ships was about sixty miles from the center of the heaviest Japanese colony in the Philippines.

DEPOSITS

MARKETING QUOTA VOTED FOR BURLEY TOBACCO

Burley tobacco growers voting in a referendum April 9 approved of Burley tobacco marketing quotas for the 1938 marketing year. To keep the supply of Burley tobacco in line with demand, an amendment to the new Farm Act approved March 26 provided for the setting up of marketing quotas for the marketing year beginning October 1, 1938. The national marketing quota of 350 million pounds is the number of pounds WPA farmers can sell without a penalty. This quota is 53 million pounds less than the 403 million produced and sold in 1937.

CUTTING DOWN CLOTHES

If you have worn the made-over clothing of your parents or of older brothers and sisters, you will understand the title of this article. If you were an older child or else lived in more modern times, you may not know enough to sympathize with us younger brothers and sisters. We youngsters of a generation ago felt quite often, our greatest humiliation when we appeared in public clad entirely in well-recognized garments, in spite of their having been cut down to fit us. Worse still, we often had to wear cast-off clothing just as it was, regardless of our size or shape. As I am very short of legs, I have had to suffer agonies by wearing pants that had to be rolled up, and the bag at the knee made the lower part of my leg look like Alky Oop's ample ankles. Why, if I had got lost, up until I was, say, fifteen years old, there would have been no difficulty finding me, for my three older brother's garments were known far and wide, by size and cut and color.

When there were so many children to be clad, and so little to clothe them with, it took magic to provide enough clothing. Fortunately, cottonade and jeans are pretty tough and can stand several seasons, making due allowance for tears and scratches such as any boy's garments are subject to. Hickory shirts never wear out and can help raise a whole family of boys. All of these things shrink, though, and help in the natural process of growth to make clothes too small for the big boy. Now, I know that some defining is necessary at this point. "Hickory" is strong shirt material, thick and tough; "jeans" is heavy woolen cloth to make pants (and warm quilts from the scraps); "cottonade" is heavy cotton pants (denim is it or something like it).

The small brother is waiting in suspense for the garments to become too small for the one up the line, waiting with wicked desires in his heart that earthquakes or fires or floods or death may remove the cause of his humiliation. If there is still a younger brother, though, he can have his reward by feeling superior when the much-worn garment passes on down to the unfortunate little rascal. It is hard on a boy that does not grow rather fast, for then cast-off garments pile up on him. I was slow of growth and had my humiliation increased year by year. I had my share of garments, so far as numbers were concerned, but such numbers!

If a boy lives long enough, however, he comes to the day when he can have a suit or an overcoat or a pair of pants all his own. Never again can I feel as big as I did in my first overcoat, one bought just for me and not already a family relic. Some of us may have forgotten how deep was our sense of disgrace when we had to wear out a pair of Sister's shoes, but I suspect that we have never forgotten the sense of triumph when we could sail under our own colors, without being twitted by the big boys because of our museum of inherited clothing.—Kentucky Folklore Series.

BOB JONES' COMMENTS

Recently the writer read an interesting editorial on "Life and College Education" in the Chicago Tribune. The editorial referred to a message delivered by Chicago Business men to a large group of high school seniors and high school graduates who were in attendance at a career conference. The Business men said that college education is not essential to employment or a successful business career. The writer in his travels in all sections of America finds many college graduates who are out of employment. Recently the Bob Jones College, located at Cleveland, Tennessee, of which institution I happen to be the founder, made a careful survey of the record and standing of all of the graduates of the college. Every graduate has a good position. They are all successful in their chosen fields and professions. There is not a whiskey-drinker in the crowd. Those who are married have happy homes. There have been no divorces. Most of the graduates are active Christian workers. "Will you guarantee me a position, if I will come to the Bob Jones College and take a business course?" a young lady wrote the president of the college sometime ago. "As far as we know, every young man and young woman who has taken a business course in our college has a position, but we do not guarantee any student a position. We do guarantee every student that he will be able to hold a position if he will do the work we require and live according to the moral and spiritual standards of the college," the president replied. I have found that most of the college graduates whom I have met, who were out of employment had had employment, but they did not have the character and moral stamina to hold a position.

I have said on many platforms that it is my honest opinion that a large percentage of young people who have gone to college would have been better off if they had remained at home and had gone to work at something. Unless the atmosphere of a college or university is conducive toward the building of character, the institution is a handicap to young people. A recent investigation of a Western university showed that sixty percent of the young ladies "drink when they go out on dates". Any man who has a Christian slant on life is bound to realize that the welfare of the youth of this nation is imperiled by the "moral drift" in many of our colleges and universities. The parents of this country owe it to their children to protect them by seeing to it that their children, especially for the first two years of college, are in a real Christian environment. You will note that I say "real Christian environment". I know some church schools in America where there are immoral practices, such as drinking and sensuality. A church school when it becomes unchristian is the most dangerous place on earth in which to educate young people. There are good orthodox colleges in America. There are a few educational institutions left, institutions that put first things first. If parents will select such schools in which to educate their children, they will have sons and daughters who will find positions when they get through college and they will have the moral character to hold the positions when they get them.

VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE

Projects for vocational agriculture boys are desirable because: They help to create a better feeling toward farming. They cause the boy to take pride in his work. He will do it faster and better if he knows that it is his. He will take more interest in farming and will more than likely become a good farmer. I know from experience that I will take more interest in something that I own than I will if it belongs to somebody else.

They teach a boy to work which is another good reason why I think they are desirable. If a boy grows up with a hoe in his hand he will be more "used to it" when he gets out on a farm of his own. If he is grown and has never seen or done any work he will not know much about it. He would not know what to do at the right time.

When a boy completes his projects and has a little money he will, usually, want to save it, whereas, if the money is given to him he will spend it for things that he would not otherwise. If he has earned it by "the sweat of his brow" he will think twice before he spends it.

They make the boy work and usually become a good manager, whereas, if he has never done any work he would not know what to do. He will usually manage and think if he sees somebody with a better project than his. He will think of all the ways that he can have a better project and put one into use. I know from experience that this is so.

A project teaches a boy to take care of things. If he never had any experience he will, more than likely, be rough with animals and not take care of his other projects.

A disadvantage is: If a boy boards or lives in town he does not have a fair chance at his projects. If he lived in the country he usually has a chance to carry out projects. About the only thing a city boy can do is have a poultry project or raise a garden if he can get the land.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

APPLE and horseradish relish offers the perfect accompaniment for roast fowl, baked fresh ham or pork. This unusual combination of steamed sliced apples, grated horseradish and whipped cream results in a relish of surprising flavor and zesty tang. It is most effective when served to complement meats of sweet succulent flavor.

To prepare the relish: Core and steam five tart apples. Rub through a sieve. Add ½ cup grated horseradish and 2 tablespoons powdered sugar. Chill and fold in an equal amount of whipped cream. This amount yields 1 pint.

Apples baked in milk introduce a new and doubly nourishing version of an old favorite dessert. Pare and core six apples. Place in a baking pan, and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons flour, ½ cup of sugar and 2 tablespoons of shortening which have been rubbed together. Pour over 1 cup of milk and bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) This amount yields six servings.

(Under Auspices of Ova O. Haney, County Supt.)

RESIDENT PROJECT

Louisville, Ky., March 17, 1938
Honorable Alben W. Barkley,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Barkley:

This will acknowledge your letter concerning the desire of Supt. Ova O. Haney to have a resident project in Morgan County. Mr. Haney brought this to our attention probably about the same time he wrote you, and we have had some correspondence with him about it.

We are hoping to have several of these resident projects, and have had one approved to operate at Carrollton to serve a group of northern counties where we have been unable to operate local projects because of the small number of youth. We have been held up on starting these resident projects, however, due to the fact that the exemption we secured from Washington was not deemed sufficient by the WPA Employment division here to take care of youth wages. We took the matter up with our Washington Office, and it seems that it has been necessary for them to secure an executive order over the point and they are working on this. It is hoped that this matter will be cleared up in the near future so that we can get some of these resident projects in operation.

It is necessary that the first ones we start be in places where facilities for housing the young people are available and preferably in sections of the state where we are unable to operate local projects and where we want to make assignments available to all the certified young people. I explained this in detail to Superintendent Haney, and believe he understands it fully.

Incidentally, we have a very fine local project program in Morgan County, of which Superintendent Haney is sponsor, and have done a lot of good work there. We also have a large number of young people in Morgan County on the student aid program.

Cordially yours,
ROBERT K. SALYERS, State
NYA Director.

Washington, D. C., March 18, 1938
Honorable Alben W. Barkley,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Barkley:

This is in reply to your letter of March 12 to Mr. Williams, in which, at the instance of Mr. Ova O. Haney, Superintendent of the Morgan County Schools, you request information regarding a Kentucky project application to provide for completing the construction of the Cannel City graded school building.

This proposal, identified in our files as State Serial No. 20723, to continue work commenced under Official Project No. 165-43-2557, has been assigned Official Project No. 465-43-2-190 in Presidential Letter No. 7707, which was signed March 7 and currently awaits clearance, as you know, makes Kentucky projects of this Administration available for operation at the discretion of the State Works Progress Administrator, Mr. George H. Goodman, 9th and Broadway, Louisville.

Sincerely yours,
G. E. TEXTOR, Acting Director,
Project Control Division.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 10, 1938
Mr. Ova O. Haney, Superintendent,
Morgan County Schools,
West Liberty, Kentucky.

Dear Superintendent Haney:

Thank you for your letter of January 5. I need not tell you that we have appreciated the splendid cooperation you have given NYA in all its phases from the beginning. I wish we had a good many more sponsors like you.

The resident project program is an interesting development, but one which will have to be carefully worked out. In the beginning we hope to use it in such a way as to offer assignments to those young people not now available to a local project. As you know, there are some counties in the state in which, because of the small number of certified youth, we are not able to operate a project. In other counties where we do operate units, scattered youth in some parts of the counties were unable to reach them.

Our first idea, therefore, would be to service such young people. The second objective of the residence project program is to offer related training. In this connection, such a project has a great deal of advantage but the Washington office has recommended that to begin with at least, such projects be operated in connection with and under the sponsorship of existing educational institutions such as colleges, or those having provision for vocational work. This is necessary in order that both supervision and instruction can be secured without cost to NYA.

It is our purpose to continue the local project program wherever practicable, and to expand the training phase of it. The greatest handicap of the resident project program is that its added cost makes it possible to take care of a smaller number of young people, and, as you know, our quota has just recently been reduced. For the present, we shall have to concentrate on locations where facilities are available for housing the young people, but the program may be expanded later on.

In the near future, I hope to be able to pay you a visit, and talk this matter over with you.

Cordially yours,
ROBERT K. SALYERS, State
NYA Director.

Mr. Dear Mr. Haney:

The enclosed letter from the WPA Administration with reference to your application for the completion of the above school, is forwarded for your information. You will note that this application has been approved by the President, and is at the present time awaiting clearance by the Comptroller General. I am sure this approval will be forthcoming in the near future, and I sincerely hope that your project may go forward. It is a real pleasure to aid you in this matter, and with kind personal regards I remain,

Miss Keeton Entertained

Everybody in school regrets very much to lose Miss Keeton and they expressed their regrets by a farewell party given at the High School Auditorium, Friday, April 23. This party was a complete surprise to Miss Keeton for she had gone to the home of Miss Lena McClure's for dinner. Miss Lena pretended to have an appointment at school and asked Miss Keeton to bring her. All the other teachers and a number of pupils were waiting for her. A number of games were played and refreshments were served. Miss Keeton received a number of gifts and very graciously accepted everything done in her honor.

Rehearsal of Senior Play in Progress

The Seniors of M. C. H. S. have started rehearsing on their commencement play. It is a grand comedy in three acts. The name is "Trouble in Paradise." It takes place in the lobby of a college dormitory. The play is to be given May 19, 1938. It includes some very good characters as Professor Salzman, the madman Miss Winchbee, football players, pretty co-eds, the first-timed freshman and his sister, and the colored janitor.

So if you want to have a good time be sure and come. We think it is going to be the best play given this year.

The school certainly appreciates the community's interest in coming to see the other plays and we hope that their school spirit will continue and that they will come out to see the Senior Play.

The following pupils are on the honor roll for the second six weeks of the second semester:

Sophomore A—Vic Cottle, Ralph Gullett, Bonnie Long, Chester Rose, Arnold Tyler, Jessie Tyree, Louise Tyree, Clint Potter.
Junior—Jesse Cottle.
Freshmen—Helen Elam, Jean Whitt, Bernice Williams, Opal Hurley, Imogene Adams, Ova Tyree, Mabel Cottle, Joseph Peyton.
Senior—Lillian Dunn, Freida Cox, Delphia McClure, Miriam Byrd.

Principal W. L. Carpenter was in Lexington on Saturday of last week.

Dr. J. O. Van Meter, president of Lee's College, was a visitor at M. C. H. S. Tuesday morning. He spoke to the Senior class and urged them to continue with their education. He spoke on various subjects, which made the Seniors think more seriously of the future.
